

Romney Red

"A wine good enough to tempt a Mormon."

Romney Red is deep in color with intense flavors reminiscent of black cherries, currants, and marshmallows. This hearty cuvée with herbal notes, is the finest and, alas, the final vintage to come from the venerable Bella Sera Winery.

Bella Sera, established in 1863, was acquired through a leveraged buyout, in 2009, by Bain Capital, and its grapes as well as its assets were then sucked dry. "Why make something that's against my religion to drink when I can make money?" said Romney, "I was against the wine industry bailout from the beginning. Or maybe I was for it — I can't remember who I'm talking to right now."

Romney Red goes well with crow, as Mitt has discovered, or would have discovered had he had any of it, with his post-election crow.

GOVERNMENT WARNING: If you're going to discuss politics while you're drinking, you might as well discuss religion too.
